IN FOCUS

The Hard Truth

There is no Christianity without a cross. And if we want to follow, we have to take up the cross. That's the hard truth.

Taking up the cross doesn't mean coping well with sickness or bad luck. We take up the cross when we choose sacrifice we could avoid in order to help others.

Here's a brief story.

Mark was a volunteer when our school helped house homeless families for a week. We needed volunteers to come Sunday morning to help serve breakfast. Mark came early, even though Saturday night had been a big night for him with mates. Mark was the only student to show up. He was tired. But he chose to sacrifice. And homeless families had a better day because of it.

Living as a Christian means choosing little sacrifices like Mark's on a daily basis. Taking up the cross means giving up your life each day in little ways. You take up your cross when you help someone without having to be asked. You take up your cross when you reach out to the unpopular kid in the yard. You take up your cross when you sacrifice time with friends for time at the soup kitchen or homeless shelter.

Like Peter, each day we must decide who we think Jesus is. We show that he is our Messiah (the one who came to save us) when we choose to sacrifice for others. Oddly enough, it is through those little sacrifices that we really save our own lives – and add to the lives of others.

When have you chosen a sacrifice – taken up a cross that has shown others who Jesus is to you?
